ESI Expands Consulting Services Now Part of PMI's Registered Consultant Program

ARLINGTON, Va. USA – June 20, 2011 – ESI International today announced the expansion of its worldwide consulting services, including the appointment of Practice Managers' for each of the company's global regions. ESI also announced it is one of the first participants in the Project Management Institute's Registered Consultant Program.

"ESI consulting has been leading the PM learning industry for more than a decade with its wide range of services focused on ensuring our clients get the right PM learning; and that, that learning is adopted on-the-job," said John Elsey, President and CEO, ESI. "As organizations demand greater accountability of their learning programs, the need for services to ensure knowledge transfer will increase. ESI stands at the ready to provide support from assessment to adoption."

For the Americas, Matthew J. Ferguson has been appointed Practice Manager; Pete Cresswell has been appointed for Europe, the Middle East and Africa; and Ravi Sahi, with support from Cresswell for the Asia-Pacific region. In addition, ESI's consulting team draws expertise from more than a dozen in-house subject matter experts as well as the company's pool of extensively vetted consultants, based in nearly 100 countries, around the world.

"Being in the PMI® RCP provides our clients with added reassurance," said Ferguson, "In addition to meeting a range of business qualifications, participating organizations must adhere to a strict code of conduct."

ESI's consulting services include: individual and organizational assessments; coaching services, including one-on-one/small groups, executive sessions and impact workshops; Agile PM rollouts; troubled project recovery; PPM implementations; PMO and PM/BA Center of Excellence development and deployment; and methodology development and refinement.
